

Importance of Counseling for a Woman's Sex Problems

We must first understand that there are not many women who are totally happy with their sexual fulfillment. Many feel there is nothing they can do about it but try different things to spice it up and in many cases try a different partner. The rest feel that this is the way it is and they must live with it. None of this is correct and no problem is too small or too large. In fact it is the small ones that are the most irritating and discouraging.

Sexual problems usually stem from a woman's early life and the actual root can be discovered there. However that is not always the case. Many times it has to do with incompatibility and bad choice of partners. Marriage many times was not consummated properly and pre marriage sexual activity many times changes by both now being very close as opposed to prior to marriage. Regardless this can be helped and the results can yield a very satisfying sexual life. The amount of love making that occurs between two people does not always yield the most satisfying conclusions. It is not how often but how well two people conjugate. It has to do with the desire to make each other happy rather than make one's self happy.

There is nothing that cannot be corrected and to think one can do it alone many times is the cause of greater problems occurring; connected or not everything grows. Especially when one lets it fester and it begins to create stress and one does not relate it. The stress is blamed on other small disturbing items and situations. All in all these disturbing sexual problems are extremely irritating and one does not have to continue to be plagued by them.

Something can be done about it and many times it needs to be someone who is not close to the individual; more so an experienced counselor whom the individual can open up to totally, knowing it is completely confidential. The association between the counselor and the client needs to be close, relaxing and very deep. This will allow complete confidence and the willingness to reveal her innermost secrets and feelings. This and only this type of association will allow the counselor to be able to locate the root of the problem and deal with it properly.

Another important item this type of association allows is that a fully open woman is prepared to understand the explanations of the counselor; in addition it allows the counselor to easily get through to the client and solve the problem. Therefore it is all in the rapport between client and counselor.

Finally there is no reason to allow any type of sexual problem to exist or fester while you hope it will get better in time or you feel reading advice will do it. Many supposed help centers or individuals who also provide others to do their work; are useful or in any way low cost. For the most part they handle clients like a meat market. Sorry to say it but even with all the letters after their names the counseling field has become a money situation and the more the merrier. But to value a client and to be the only one to answer and counsel the client is rare and many times although one states that, the size of the business and complexity of the ad or website says it all. The busy business of making money is all but hidden by the suave language and promises. One must take the safest path and if there is to be total confidence then the right counselor needs to be chosen even to the point of conversation to determine that fact.

That kind of evaluation and looking will determine the right one and when the proper counselor is found half the battle is won. My estimation is that there is no better counselor for a woman than a man and for a man a woman counselor.

About the Author

The author of this article is Edward J. Signoretti, a sexual counselor with over 40 years of experience in counseling and assisting women to conquer their very stressful problems with sexual connotations being prominent. He has always been an individual and takes only a very limited amount of clients at any time. The most important part of his effort is success for his client. The client is always guaranteed complete confidentiality, regardless. Giving up, is not on the table so one needs to be prepared to root out the problem and then erase it completely and bring health and total enjoyment to a free sex life, with whomever she intends to share it with. Visit his website and look at simplicity that will lead to closeness and complete understanding.
