

How to Purchase the Right Condom for You

Knowing how to purchase the right condom for you is a highly personal decision. There are many factors ranging from size to style that one must take into account. These factors will make a big difference in the performance and effectiveness of the condom. Since there are so many types of condoms, it is important to know and understand the differences between each type of condom and the different brands of condom.

Outside of abstinence, the only real safe sex is to use a condom. With a condom as a birth control, there is a 98-99% chance of not getting the woman pregnant. You also significantly reduce the chance of developing any type of sexually transmitted diseases through body fluid contact. This requires the right type of condom for the individual though. Not every condom will work for every person, which is why there are so many options available. Luckily, no one needs to embarrass themselves going to the stores and looking stuck; they can go to Condom Man to find all of the products they need.

The first is to know if there are any rubber allergies between yourself and your partner. If there are, latex condoms may not be the best option, but rather an all-natural condom should be chosen. Luckily, every brand offers this as an option. The next thing to know is one's size. While each condom can be stretched to fit, and all should fit snugly, there are some differences in sizes. Most men will need the average size; there are some who are more endowed than others are. For them, there are the larger sizes. These larger sizes are offered by all of the different companies, so they are not too hard to find. These larger sizes offer the more endowed men the pleasure and safety that one can feel with a properly fitting condom.

The next thing to think about is features. There are many features that one can find in a condom. Most of the condoms come with contraceptives and lubricants, although some can be found without these features. It is generally considered a good idea to use condoms with these though. There are also those with ridges, bumps, and other features like a vibrating ring. Durex Preformax even has a special lubricant that delays the male orgasm and allows the man to last longer.

Once the right condom is picked out, understanding how to put on a condom becomes the next very important thing. Luckily, that is fairly simple, and every box of condoms has explicit instructions inside the box. Simply open the pack, place the condom on the head of the penis, pinch the top of the condom gently, and unroll the condom down the shaft. Knowing how to use a condom allows for the condom to be the best pregnancy and aids prevention device on the market. Do not forget to put on a condom every time you engage in sex. It only takes one time to have a lifetime of consequences.
